Why Should I Major in Management at Seton Hall?

The Department of Management at Seton Hall will teach you the core skills needed by great managers: how to plan strategically, how to organize human and material resources effectively, and how to control business operations efficiently. With this knowledge and skill set, you will have the know-how to plan, execute and lead in any organization, including corporations, government, nonprofit, labor and entrepreneurial environments.

The Curriculum:

The management curriculum offers three tracks in which students can complete their management elective courses — human capital management, executive management and entrepreneurship. Human capital courses focus on compensation, managing diversity, and leveraging human capital and knowledge. Executive management explores areas such as principles of supervision and executive control, leadership and negotiation. Entrepreneurship courses concentrate on innovation and entrepreneurship within large and small business settings.

What Does It Take to Graduate?

In addition to the core business requirements, students must complete one required course and four management electives. Students must also complete the liberal arts and sciences core requirements along with liberal arts and general electives. Students are required to have at least a 2.0 GPA in their combined management courses.

Career Opportunities:

The Department of Management sponsors and supports qualified students in the cooperative education program, which can often lead to full-time job offers. A management concentration prepares you for both entry-level and long-range advancement. Many management majors enter corporate training programs designed to prepare them for middle management positions. These positions include human resource management, compensation management, inventory management, production and operations.

A bachelor’s degree in management offers excellent preparation for continued graduate studies in management or a Master of Business Administration (M.B.A.).

How Do I Apply for Admission?

Send your completed application to Seton Hall University and include the $55 non-refundable application fee ($45 if applying online). Freshman applicants must submit official high school transcripts and any college or university transcripts where credit was attempted, plus the results of the SAT I or ACT assessments. Transfer students must submit transcripts from each college or university where credit was attempted. Those with fewer than 24 earned credits must complete the freshman requirements. Applications are available at admissions.shu.edu.

Can I Get Financial Aid?

Almost 90 percent of the students who entered Seton Hall last year received some form of financial aid, and 75 percent of these students received money directly from the University. The four types of financial aid include scholarships, grants and discounts, loans, and part-time jobs on campus.
