SETON HALL UNIVERSITY DEFERMENT POLICIES:

- Students may defer an application or an admission decision and scholarship up to one academic year from the original semester. Students wishing to apply/enroll beyond one academic year from the original semester must reapply and previous offers of admission and scholarships are not guaranteed.
- All scholarship offers for the original term of entry will be deferred along with the student's offer of admission.
- Students deferring an offer of admission to the University may not attend any other institutions in the interim between the semester the admission is offered and the semester the student enrolls at Seton Hall. If the student attends another institution during the deferment period, he or she forfeits any current admission and scholarship offers and must submit a new transfer application. His/her application will be reevaluated for admission when updated transcripts are received.
- The University has the right to revoke an offer of admission and/or scholarship if the student has academic or disciplinary issues during the deferment period.
