Writing for College Summer Institute
July 19 – July 23 2010
Main Campus Seton Hall University

The Writing for College Summer Institute is a one-week on-campus program designed to expose high school students to different types of academic writing and reading in a college setting; to acquaint students with college expectations for reading and writing; to build students’ skills in the areas of academic reading, writing, and to introduce students to the Seton Hall community. Students will read, write, discuss, listen, present, critique, and analyze their own writing and writing processes, as well as those of other participants in the class. Students present a final project related to their research and writing for the week, focused on a topic of interest to the student and approved by the instructor.

Learn about the rudiments of literary craft and the three genres of creative writing -- fiction, poetry and creative non-fiction

Part I: Reading and Writing for College
✓ learn and develop types of writing produced for college read
✓ understand complex texts in a variety of disciplines
✓ produce writing in the various academic genres
✓ use technology tools for academic work

Part II: Research Skills
✓ develop research and writing skills to produce sound academic papers
✓ work on writing projects
✓ produce a final research paper
✓ learn how to use technology to facilitate academic research

- Morning sessions and afternoon sessions
- Co-taught by university writing experts
- Peer review workshops

Tuition for program: $695

For further information, please contact Cindy Jimenez
(973) 761-9087 or Email: cindy.jimenez @shu.edu